'Wonder Boy' Attacks Tuna Canning Trust

ASTORIA, ORE.—The efforts of a Seattle "wonder boy" to break the tuna canning monopoly of California packing firms might well decide the price of a tuna sandwich at the corner drugstore.

Nick Bez, a determined Yugoslav immigrant from Seattle, has just delivered the second blow of a one-two punch.

A converted navy vessel is fishing at present off Costa Rica in "home waters" of the Californians.

The ship is a former repair ship renamed the Saipan.

The Saipan is the "mothership" in a new technique to freeze and store yellowfin tuna off the hot, tropical coasts of Latin-America. Capacity is 75 tons of fish.

Financed by RFC

The Saipan is the follow-up of Bez first ship which he delivered with the aid of four million dollars spent on the ship Pacific Explorer by the reconstruction finance corporation.

The Pacific Explorer is being refitted in Seattle for further "exploratory" trips, probably into the Bering sea off the Russian coast.

The determined Bez has still another blow ready for delivery. Another "mothership" called the Tinian is being outfitted at Astoria.

It too, will store 75 tons of frozen tuna.

And here is how Bez hopes to affect that drugstore tuna sandwich by his gamble on the high seas.

Operation Is Seasonal

The Astoria tuna canneries have been operating only during the summer and fall months, canning Albacore tuna, caught off the west coast of the United States.

If the expensive machinery and well-paid workers can be kept busy all year canning the tropical yellowfin tuna, then the sandwich is going to cost less.

Also, there will be a wider market for northwest canneries because the scarce Albacore is a de luxe tuna, not like the yellowfin which loves to snuggle up to a milk shake.

But the counter punch in this battle may land squarely on the Bez beak. He has to whip the tough, enterprising California packers.

He also has to find the tuna.

And there are a lot of bankrupt tuna fishermen around who explain that the latter can be very difficult.

New Disposable Nursing Bottle Eliminates Baby's Problems

CHICAGO.—More than 80 years ago the standard nursing bottle was invented. Before that, babies who, for one reason or another, could not be nursed by their mothers did the best they could with the aid of a flask-shaped bottle and a long rubber hose. At the end of the hose was a crude nipple, fore-runner of today's variety.

With the exception of a few minor changes and adjustments, the glass nursing bottle has remained virtually unchanged.

One of the first major changes in baby nursing is a new collapsible, disposable, pre-sterilized bottle which does away with many of the headaches that have been plaguing mothers.

The new bottles are made of a plastic material which, while strong and sturdy, is at the same time soft and pliable. In fact, as the infant removes the formula, the bottle actually collapses, entirely eliminating problems of back-pressure and collapsed nipples.

With these new bottles, you use one just once and throw it away. The bottles come in a long roll, sealed off from each other at intervals to form either four- or eight-ounce bottles. When mother prepares the formula, she merely snips off the number of bottles needed, fills them, and puts them in the refrigerator. The only things she sterilizes are the nipples, the caps, and the rings which hold the nipple to the bottle.

FBI Finds 8.5 Per Cent of Federal Workers Break Law

WASHINGTON.—The government is uncovering some strange and embarrassing facts about its federal workers as a result of loyalty investigations.

One of every 12, the federal Bureau of Investigation is finding, has some previous police record. The number so found now runs into thousands.

"The great mass," says J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, "are felonies: we have very few misdemeanors."

Charged with ferreting out disloyal workers, the FBI has proceeded far enough in its loyalty investigations so far to establish that a fairly consistent ratio of 8.5 per cent of government workers apparently have been lawbreakers.

However, the FBI director notes that even for those with police records, the files reflect no disloyalty information whatever in 99 per cent of the cases.

Thus far, a boxscore of the FBI investigations indicates that 6,221 of the 71,020 seeking atomic energy positions and 11,821 of the 410,211 workers checked under the loyalty program have prior police records.

Boy Has 17 Years to Pay Fine for Smashing Window

BURY, ENGLAND. — Four-year-old Stephen Jones has 17 years to save up three dollars to pay a judgment.

The obligation grew out of an incident involving a stone about the size of a peach and the glass frame of a greenhouse. The county court held Stephen and the stone were responsible for a smashed pane of glass.

Then the law took a curious twist. The action, it was held, was against Stephen, not his father. And the judgment was against Stephen. But a judgment cannot be collected from a legal infant, so the green house man has to wait until the boy is 21 before he can collect.

Eccentric Recluse Wills Greta Garbo Big Tax Bill

ALLEGAN COUNTY, MICH.—Film Actress Greta Garbo will realize little if anything from an estate willed to her by an eccentric recluse, it appears.

A final account filed in probate court here of the American assets of the late Hedwig Dorne, Michigan farmer, revealed $1,119 with claims and taxes of $2,099 due.

Approximately $19,999 in assets in England also probably will be wiped out by inheritance taxes, court officials believe.

Spokesmen for Miss Garbo said that whatever proceeds accrued from the estate of the 76-year-old Dorne, who had never seen the actress, would go to charity.

'Worst' Reckless Driver Ends Wild Spree in Jail Cell

WICHITA, KANS. — Fining the motorist $600 and sentencing him to five months in jail, Judge Roy Rogers said the case was the "worst instance of reckless driving" ever brought to his attention.

Joseph D. Rosario Jr., 30, drew the penalties for:

Speeding 80 miles an hour at night through heavy downtown traffic in a 20-mile zone; running 12 traffic lights; driving without a license; reckless driving; driving without lights; driving on the wrong side of the street; possessing liquor in violation of Kansas dry laws and resisting arrest.

The wild chase, with two motorcycle officers in pursuit, ended with Rosario's car smashing to a stop in a clump of shrubbery.

He wasn't hurt.

Thief Steals Inventor's Photographic Booby Trap

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Ross E. Piper rigged up a complicated burglar booby trap in his room with a system of photographic flash bulbs wired to a radio and an electric clock. They flashed when anybody opened his dresser drawer. He also smeared the drawer handles with a mixture of indelible pencil lead and sirup.

He told police that he found somebody had entered his room and used one of his clean towels to wipe the strup mixture off his fingers.

Piper, a railroad switchman, ruefully added that his contraption, but nothing else, had been stolen.

Bullets Fail to Irk Farmer Who Waits for News of Baby

BINGHAMTON, N. Y. — Randall Hitchcock of nearby Chenango Bridge was sitting in a hotel in Bogota, Columbia, as snipers' bullets whizzed around during the rioting there.

That was bad enough, but Hitchcock was even more worried about his wife back home. She was expecting a baby.

As the dismal hours passed, he heard sputterings from the small radio and an electric clock. They flashed when anybody opened his dresser drawer. He also smeared the drawer handles with a mixture of indelible pencil lead and sirup.

He told police that he found somebody had entered his room and used one of his clean towels to wipe the strup mixture off his fingers.

Piper, a railroad switchman, ruefully added that his contraption, but nothing else, had been stolen.

Notice to Anglers: New Scooterpoopers Lure Bass

GREENWOOD, S. C. — The day may come when a fisherman will remark to his companion, "You'd better change the record, the bass aren't hitting that one."

If it does, the credit would go to Alex Woodle, Greenwood's fishing jeweler, who has developed a noise-making lure that has proved popular with the local fish and fishermen.

Woodle has long worked on the theory that fish were attracted by certain noises. He made experiments in which he tried to incorporate noise-making qualities into his baits.

One of his first efforts contained the works of a watch. It caught fish, but it proved too expensive and too disposed to break down.

Now he has devised a hollow metal box that amplifies the sound of turning propellers on the bait. He calls it the scooterpooper. It makes a distinct whirring sound as it is retrieved, attracting all the bass within hearing distance.

NOTE: We will be closed next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, for Thanksgiving Holiday.
